✓ Career Objective

I didn't come to Qatar to chase job titles — I came to change my life through honest work, day by day. Every shift I've completed, every note I've counted, every challenge I've handled has taught me more than any classroom ever could. I'm now seeking a Teller role where real experience, discipline, and integrity matter. My goal is to grow in an environment that respects consistency over appearance, and commitment over words — so I can build a career based not on luck, but on quiet, honest effort.

✓ Career Summary

- I've survived rush hours, fake notes, and customers asking for 1 riyal discount on 2 riyal items. If that doesn't qualify me for a Teller job, I don't know what does. Behind the humor is two years of real experience in cash handling, customer service, and pressure management — and I'm now ready to bring that calm, capable energy to a serious financial role.

✓ Experience

- Old Gulistan Restaurant (Doha, Qatar) July 2024 - June 2025

Assistant Manager & Cashier

This restaurant became my first big responsibility. I didn't apply as a manager — I earned that role. When others stepped back, I stepped forward. Whether it was a customer yelling about cold food or a missing delivery man, I handled it — not because I had to, but because I couldn't let things fall apart.

I worked with cooks, cleaners, and customers — learned to balance between people and profit. I started writing down orders manually when the system failed, apologizing when the kitchen delayed, and solving problems before they reached the owner.

Some days, I worked 14 hours straight — no complaints. Because I knew I was building something more than a paycheck.

✓ Always closed the cash account without mismatch.

- Lusail Food Mart (Doha, Qatar) January 2024 - June 2024

Sales Assistant & Cashier

I joined this job just to earn — but I left with much more: discipline, patience, and presence of mind. At first, I was just stocking shelves. But my attention to detail got noticed. I was shifted to the cashier, where mistakes are not forgiven.

I still remember my first full-day shift alone. I was nervous. But at the end of the day, when my cash and report matched exactly, the manager patted my back — and that moment meant more to me than any salary.

There, I learned the power of trust. And I promised myself — I won't break it.

- Welcome Restaurant (Doha, Qatar) August 2023 - December 2023

Cashier

It was a short job, but it hit hard. I was new to Qatar — everything was unfamiliar: food names, POS systems, currency, even customers' behavior.

But I showed up every day like I'd been doing it for years. I made mistakes — yes. But I owned up to them, fixed them, and never repeated the same one twice.

Within weeks, I wasn't just taking orders. I was managing shifts, counting the register, and guiding newcomers. That was the beginning of my real journey in Qatar — and I never looked back.

It was the place where I first realized: no matter where you start, how you finish is what defines you.

In that small restaurant, I learned to stay steady under stress, polite under pressure, and responsible even when no one was watching.

That job didn't last long — but its lessons have lasted with me every single day since.

- Homeplus Hypermarket (Feni, Bangladesh)

Sales Associate & Cashier

I joined this shop as a helper, but within a few weeks I was trusted with the cash counter. My days were spent helping customers choose items, managing small change, keeping notes clean and sorted, and making sure the register always balanced.

Sometimes, I was the only one on the floor – so I learned to stay alert, solve small issues quickly, and deal with different people in different moods.

I wasn't trained in a classroom. I learned by doing – standing for hours without breaks, keeping calm when systems went down, staying back to correct another person's mistake, and never letting my counter come up short at the end of the day.

- ✓ Why I'm Ready For A Teller Role

Because I've already been tested in the field. I've managed real money, real pressure, and real people. I've done the job behind the counter – now I want to do it at a desk, with more responsibility. I bring not just experience, but respect – for money, for systems, and for trust. That's what a Teller must stand for.

- ✓ Personal Statement

- I came to Qatar not with high degrees, but with strong intentions – to work, to learn, and to prove myself. Over the last 1 year and 8 months, I've worked in restaurants and hypermarkets, taken charge without a title, solved problems without a manual, and earned trust without asking for it.

I've held cash drawers like they were my own savings. I've worked shifts where no one showed up, and I ran the floor alone. I've corrected mistakes others ignored and smiled at customers who didn't. My journey is not written in certificates, but in daily efforts. I am now ready to bring that experience, commitment, and discipline to a Teller role – where accuracy and trust define the work.
